PURE ARTICLE.

There are no articles that Housekeepers have to purchase (with perhaps the single exception of Pen) that they get so deceived in, or find it such hard work to get suited on, as the two that head this article.

PURE COFFEE.

Several years ago we were connected with one of the GREAT and BEST Coffee dealers in Boston, and worked with him in the mill, and with his assistance and instruction, we learned the art of roasting Coffee, but when we commenced trading in our present location we had to do as all other dealers in Bangor had to do (not having the machinery to roast), have our Coffee roasted for us in Boston. We were continually having trouble. One of would be very good, again, it would be very poor for some time. We were aware there was no need of this, if they would take ordinary care in the selection of their raw Coffee and roast the best; but knowing the deception practiced by wholesale Coffee dealers, we determined to protect ourselves and customers by putting up first-class machinery for roasting Coffee, and we have now two good Coffee roasters and all the apparatus capable of roasting two tons of Coffee daily, and we roast every pound of Coffee we sell.

Every cargo of Coffee that comes to this country has more or less damaged; part is inferior Coffee when shipped, and a part is damaged by the sea voyage. These damaged and inferior Coffees show their imperfections when raw, but the roasting process covers up the bad look to a large degree; but all the bad qualities will show to a good judge when cooked.

A few words in regard to Java Coffee: There are three pounds of what is called Java, sold in the United States to every pound of genuine Java imported. There are firms in New York that make a business of buying milk Coffee that looks like Java, and doctoring it, by the use of chemicals and steam they sweat the Coffee, and when it dries it turns to the rich golden color of Java; and it is then sold to the uninformed as Genuine Old Government Java Coffee. Again, many wholesale Coffee dealers sell roast Java so low that they are compelled to mix Maracaibo Coffee with Java, and they have been known to forget to put any Java in, but they did not forget to sell it for Java. All raw Coffee, if roasted properly, will shrink in weight from 12 to 18 pounds in every 100 pounds; the amount of shrinkage depends upon the age and dryness of the Coffee before roasting. All the moisture must be got out before it is roasted. Many roasters of Coffee, in order to make the shrinkage as light as possible, and that the roast Coffee shall cost as little as possible, put the Coffee through a process immediately after roasting, whereby they return a large part of the shrinkage. This process injures the Coffee, and it soon becomes tough and spongy and loses its fragrance, and will become sour in time. To the credit of the retail grocer, we must say that, as a rule, they try to get the very best Coffee, as they know that the trader that sells the best goods for the price will get the largest proportion of trade, but they try to buy lower than it can be afforded, and the wholesaler meets their price with quality to correspond.

We pay special attention to this department of our business. We buy direct of importers in large quantities for net cash, and are very careful in the selection of our raw Coffee to buy the best, consequently you can always rely upon getting fresh roasted Coffee of the very best quality and at the very lowest price of us, and we guarantee all our goods to be as represented. We do not claim to be any more honest than the average of dealers, but we knowingly pay to be honest. We can and will sell Coffee at wholesale or retail as low as the same quality or quantity can be bought in Boston. Our roast No 2 Java we warrant as good as most retailers sell for their best. Our Old Government Java is the best imported, but if you want the best Coffee you ever drank TRY T. WHITE'S BEST.

Pure Selected Spice.

Having in view the same object we had when we put in our Coffee Roasting machinery, namely, to give our customers the very best Spice, we have put in a Bretelman's French Burr Stone Spice Mill, and now grind all our Spice. We intend to put in another Spice Mill at once and a Spice Cracker, and then we shall have as well fitted a Spice and Coffee Mill as there is in the State of Maine, and the only one in Bangor, and the only one between Portland and St. John. Of all goods in the grocery line, there are none that there has been such a vast amount of deception and cheating practiced in as Spice. In fact, housekeepers have been deceived so much that they have lost confidence in all Spice grinders. In cargoes of Spices, like Coffee, there has always been a lot of damaged Spice, and there is a large trade by chemists in extracting oils from all Spices, leaving them almost worthless. These the Spice dealers grind and warrant pure. They are pure, but very poor, without strength or flavor. We select every ounce of our whole Spices with the utmost care, and know we buy the best.

We grind them Strictly Pure. All goods put up and branded Norombega Spice Mills we guarantee not only strictly pure, but also ground from the very best selected and sifted spice, and we will forfeit $100 in gold for every ounce of adulterated found in a 100 pounds of ground so branded. Consumers are learning that the best goods are the cheapest, and that poor Spices are dear at any price. Be sure and call for Norombega Mills' Spice, and take no other, if you want the best. If your grocer does not keep it, send to us and we will send it to you. But he can buy it of us at wholesale so as to retail them to you at very near the same low price we sell them at.

DR. NORMAN'S

FOOT SALVE,

The Sure Cure for Corns and Infallible Remedy for Bunions, Sore and Inflamed Joints and Chilblains.

This Salve is the result of years of study and experiments by a distinguished Chiropodist, and we feel confident, in offering it to the public, that it will meet the wants of thousands of people that are afflicted with these most troublesome of diseases—Corns, Bunions, and Sore Joints—as every person so suffering can be cured by using this Salve. It has an advantage over other preparations of a like nature in the market, that it does not burn the corn out, but it softens the flesh around it, and so separates it, that it can be removed without pain or bleeding. Persons using this Salve will find it will work as follows:

After applying the salve three or four times a ring will appear around the corn, which indicates that it has become separated from the true flesh and it can now be easily removed, or after another application it will fall of itself. For a Bunion, Sore or Inflamed Joint one application will almost entirely remove the inflammation, and if persisted in will surely cure.

This Salve will not cure a soft corn, but will remove the inflammation and keep the foot in a comfortable condition.

GIVE IT A TRIAL.

Price, 25 Cents a Box.

TO FARMERS.

We wish to call your attention to our new mill recently put in operation, and to the fact that we have a FIRST CLASS MILL, and have been in operation long enough to demonstrate that we can do FIRST CLASS WORK. There are five conditions required to make good Flour: First, a good Cleaner; second, a good run of Burrs; third, a good Bolt; fourth, a good Miller. These we feel assured we have. Now if you will furnish the fifth, this is good Wheat, we see no reason for your not obtaining good Flour. By doing the best we can we hope to merit your patronage.

THE FISHERY QUESTION.

LORD SALISBURY'S REPLY TO SECRETARY EVARTS'S LETTER.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14. The following is Lord Salisbury's reply to the dispatch of Secretary Evarts, concerning the injuries sustained by American fishermen in Fortune Bay, and the attitude of the home government in regard to colonial legislation affecting our rights under the treaty of Washington:

FOREIGN OFFICE, Nov. 7, 1878.

SIR—Her Majesty's government have had under consideration the dispatch from Mr. Evarts dated the 28th of September, and communicated to me on the 12th ult., respecting complaints made by the government of the United States, of the injuries sustained by American fishermen in Fortune Bay in January last. This dispatch is in reply to my letter of the 23d of August, in which I forwarded a copy of the report furnished by Captain Sullivan of Her Majesty's ship "Sirius," on the occurrence in question. Mr. Evarts now remarks that the United States have not been put in possession of the depositions which form the basis of that report, and are unable therefore to say whether upon their consideration the view which the government of the United States takes of these transactions upon the sworn statement of their own citizens would be at all modified. Her Majesty's government have not had the opportunity of considering the depositions which accompanied Captain Sullivan's report, and which I now have the honor to forward, appeared to them in the absence of other testimony to be conclusive as regards the facts of the case. Apart, however, from the facts in respect to which there appears to be a material divergence between the evidence collected by the United States government and that collected by the Colonial authorities, Mr. Evarts takes exception to my letter of the 23d, on the ground of my statement that the United States fishermen concerned have been guilty of breaches of the law. From this he infers an opinion on my part that it is competent for a British authority to pass laws in supersession of a treaty binding American fishermen within the three-mile limit. In pointing out that the American fishermen had broken the law within the territorial limits of Her Majesty's dominions, I had no intention of inferentially laying down any principles of international law, and no advantage would, I think, be gained by entering so fully into a discussion of the facts in question absolutely require. I hardly believe, however, that Mr. Evarts would in the discussion adhere to the broad doctrine which some portion of his language would appear to convey, that no British authority has any right to pass any kind of law binding Americans who are fishing in British waters, for if that contention be just, the same disability applies a fortiori to any other power and the waters must be delivered over to anarchy. On the other hand, Her Majesty's government will readily admit what is indeed self-evident, that the British sovereignty, as regards these matters, is limited in its scope by the engagements of the treaty of Washington which cannot be modified or effected by any municipal legislation. I cannot anticipate that with regard to these principles any difference will be found to exist between the views of the two governments. If, however, it must be admitted that the Newfoundland legislators have the right of binding the Americans who fish within the waters by laws which do not contravene the existing treaties, it must further be conceded that the duty of determining the existence of any such contravention must be undertaken by the governments and cannot be remitted to the discretion of each individual fisherman, for such a discretion, if exercised on one side, can hardly be refused on the other. If any American fisherman may violently break a law which he believes to be contrary to the treaty, a Newfoundland fisherman may violently maintain it he believes to be in accordance with the treaty. As the points in issue are frequently subtle and require considerable legal knowledge, nothing but confusion and disorder could result from such a mode of deciding the interpretation of the treaty. Her Majesty's government prefer the view that the law enacted by the legislature of the country, whatever it may be, ought to be obeyed by natives and foreigners alike, who are sojourning within the territorial limits of its jurisdiction, but that if a law has been inadvertently passed, which is in any degree or respect at variance with the rights conferred on a foreign power by treaty, the correction of the mistake, as committed at the earliest period after its existence shall have been ascertained and recognized, is a matter of international obligation. It is not explicitly stated in Mr. Evart's dispatch, that he considers any recent acts of the Colonial legislature to be inconsistent with the rights acquired by the United States under the treaty of Washington; but if that is the case, Her Majesty's government will, in a friendly spirit, consider any representations he may think it right to make upon the subject, with a hope of coming to a satisfactory understanding. WHEAT STRAW.

While the nutritive qualities of wheat straw are not to be compared to those of clover or timothy hay, yet, as winter food for young cattle, it can be made to answer the purpose almost equally as well. In the first place the wheat should have been harvested whilst yet the grain was in the dough state, at which stage it not only makes better flour, but the straw contains a considerable quantity of starch and sugar which otherwise go to the formation of woody fibre. Then in ricking the straw as it comes from the thresher, it should be well sprinkled with salt and water, and the rick carefully put up so as not to take water, with poles laid across the top to protect it against heavy winds. Thus managed the straw will carry young cattle well through the winter and until grass makes its appearance in the spring, without any other food. And where a farmer has more straw than he has cattle to consume it, and has clover to cut the following summer, the feeding qualities of such surplus straw may be astonishingly improved by allowing it to remain thus salted down until he cuts his clover, when it should be re-ricked in the following manner. First, lay a few rails on the ground for a foundation, upon which lay a course of the straw, about a foot or so in thickness; then on this a layer of the newly cut clover of like thickness, and so on, with alternate layers of straw and clover until all the latter is thus disposed of and the rick completed. Care must be taken, however, to let the clover lie in the sun barely long enough to become partially wilted, or about half cured. In this way the clover will not only cure as bright and sweet as can be, but its aroma will so penetrate the straw as to render it almost as palatable and as greedily eaten by the cattle as the clover itself, and which latter may be preserved for the use of the horses, milch cows or sheep, as may be desired.

ERRORS IN EDUCATION.

The great question as to the best methods of popular education, and which will be ever new, would find easier solution in the light of a little common sense. Let our school boards, superintendents and teachers keep the fact continually before their minds that at least four-fifths of all the children in our public schools will have ended their school-days before they are fourteen years old, and will get no further or other systematic education; that the object of the public schools is to fit their pupils for the active duties of life; and that a few elementary studies thoroughly learned and permanently fixed in their minds will be far more serviceable than a larger number of branches only half mastered, and many of them of but little practical use. If these points are kept steadily in mind and intelligently acted upon there can be no just cause of criticism, and we shall get a much larger return for our school expenditures than at present. Another fault is forcibly stated by a western superintendent, in a paper recently read before a scientific association of Milwaukee, and which is worthy the attention of all who are inclined to crowd school children, to push them ahead rapidly in many directions. The paper treats of medical hygiene in its relations to education, and declares that the system now in vogue of forcing a vast amount of a kinds of knowledge into the mind of the average child at school is one of the potent causes of mental disease later in life. The mind is overstrained in the effort to master things for the study of which it has no inclination. Our curriculum is made to cover too wide a compass. There is too much striving for universality in our common school education. The speaker was opposed to compelling all pupils to follow the same course of study, without regard to natural fitness or taste, holding that there are special aptitudes which should invariably be consulted in mapping out a plan for educating a child, and that any attempt to disregard them can only result in disappointment and not unfrequently in disaster. Those who have read Miss Phelps' charming "Story of Avis" will recall how strongly she advocates this idea, by indirection, in her account of the unfolding of the life and distinctive power of her heroine. The evil of the day in this country, says the doctor, is nervousness. It is fast becoming the national malady. If the body stands the strain long enough the disease attacks the machinery of the mind, producing some form of insanity. Careful scrutiny, he thinks, will show that too often the seeds of nervousness and ultimate insanity are sown in the school-room.

THE SALE ANNOUNCED—CAN THE GOODS BE DELIVERED?

The Republicans who voted the Greenback ticket at the late election, will find the prompt and full confirmation of our recent warning of the intrigue to sell them out in a body to the old Democratic party, in an editorial printed in double-leaded type in the Bangor Commercial of Saturday evening and copied by us on this page.

In that editorial Marcellus Emery at last discloses the game which has been industriously and secretly worked up between some of the most unscrupulous foglers of the Bourbon Democracy and a few political renegades who have sought to use the Greenback movement to advance their personal schemes. The plotting has not been kept so secret, however, as to prevent watchful observers from knowing what was going on, and the development of the intrigue has been in exact accordance with our expectations.

The blunt proposal that all the Republicans who supported an independent and distinct Greenback movement in the last election, should consentito be gobbled up wholesale by the old Democratic party that they have despised, and battled for years, would have been too startling to be put forth first by a Democratic organ, so it was planned that William M. Rust, of the Belfast Age, should act as the Benedict Arnold to deliver his companions over into the hands of the enemy. Hence the proposition to sweep the whole of the Republican Greenback voters into the Democratic net, was first put forward by Rust in his paper, to be copied by the Democrats as the advice of a Republican Greenbacker to his "brethren."

A more pliant tool could not have been selected, for Rust has been for some time acting in full sympathy with the Democratic foglers, but being worthless to them by himself, he seeks to enhance the value of his treachery by assuming the power to sell out the Republican Greenback vote to the Emery-Pillsbury Democracy of Maine.

In the editorial prepared for him by the Democratic leaders, he seeks to make light of the disastrous collapse of the Greenback movement in the November elections, and with a flourishing pretence that victory is almost attained, he works gradually up to a proposal of a union of forces, and finally swings out the plump suggestion that the union be under the name of the "NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC PARTY!"

Perhaps some of the Republican Greenback voters of Maine have heard of that party before! And doubtless a very large number of them will be slightly astonished at the generously cool proposition that they shall permit themselves to be sold out as conscripts under its black banner, by a contract between Marcellus Emery and William M. Rust!

We have not the slightest fear that this bold game can be successfully played upon men who voted on a financial issue and not as recruits to the Democratic party. The exposure of the attempted bargain will insure its absolute failure with all the great mass of men who vote from conviction and not as the chattels of such political brokers; and Marcellus Emery's editorial printed in our columns, furnishes all the evidence of the plot that any intelligent person can desire. The fulsome eulogy of Rust in that "pestilent sheet" of disloyalty and last-ditch Democracy, is as plain a proclamation of his treachery as if the Bourbon demagogue had shouted it from the house-top, and the statement that Rust has been laboring for this "union," is a truth as unusual as significant in those editorials. The adage says "the laborer is worthy of his hire," and Rust has been earning the distinguished consideration of the Democratic managers in Maine.

The transparency of this attempt to sell out a large body of voters renders it astonishing that the intriguers could have the effrontery to make it. At the recent "conference" in Gardiner, where the old Democratic State Committee assembled to "fix things" with the little clique of adventurers and chronic office-seekers who assume to carry the Greenback vote in their pockets, Eben F. Pillsbury was one of, the zealous promoters of the "union." The pretext put forward is that the Greenbackers and Democrats shall unite and make the financial issue the sole basis of the "new alliance," and that the triumph of the Greenback movement would be thereby assured. The dishonesty and hypocrisy of this pretence, is most plainly demonstrated by this incautious but emphatic declaration in the last issue of his Standard:

"IT IS EVIDENT FROM THE RESULT OF THE ELECTIONS THAT THE GREENBACK PARTY AS AN INDEPENDENT MOVEMENT HAS NO FUTURE IN THE COUNTRY AT LARGE."

That means plainly that on the distinctive Greenback issue there is no prospect of success, but that Greenbackers must all go over to the old Democratic party and support its doctrines in order to do what—why, simply to beat the Republican party and put the rebel Democracy in control of the National Government. The spider is very generous in his invitation, but the flies are not ready to rush headlong into that Democratic "parlor."

The Democratic pretence to stimulate the hopes of the Greenbackers in order to capture them, is a hollow fraud. They know that the Greenback movement demonstrated its weakness in the recent elections, and that in the States where it relied most for its strength, the falling off was so remarkable as to prove that it has no permanent power in the country. Realizing this, and seeing that there is no longer hope of using the Greenbackers in 1880 to prevent an election by the people and thus throw the Presidential election into the Confederate House, they are making a desperate effort to capture a body of voters who have all their lives fought against the Democratic party, as the worst enemy of the country's peace and prosperity.

Not only the Democratic leaders recognize the verdict of this year's elections, but the most prominent of the Republican Greenback leaders equally appreciate it. Hon. William D. Kelley, of Pennsylvania, one of the very chiefs and apostles of the Republican Greenback movement, recognizes that the people have declared for hard money, and having received a great majority in his District by reason of the support of hard money Republicans who value his services to other principles of the party, now becoming of paramount interest, his friend, the veteran John W. Forney, states in the first issue of his newspaper, on Saturday last:

"JUDGE KELLEY UNHESITATINGLY DECLARES THAT THE GREENBACK REPUBLICANS IN CONGRESS WILL HEARTILY HELP THE GOVERNMENT TO RESUME SPECIE PAYMENTS AND WILL PRAY THAT THE TREASURY MAY BE STRONG ENOUGH TO MAKE THAT RESUMPTION PERMANENT."

It is in the face of these facts that the wire-pullers of the Democratic party put forward Rust as a trumpeter to stampede the Republican Greenbackers into the Democratic camp, to make a Presidential fight in favor of the party covered with the infamy of cipher-bribery in the North and organized bull-dozing in the Solid South. The "coparceners" in this Maine attempt at barter and sale are likely to hear in the response an echo of that which answered the plea of their lace lamented Tweed—"Too thin!"

JESUITISM REDUKEI.

[From the Springfield Republican Journal.]

The Springfield Republican urges upon the Democratic majority in the next House of Representatives at Washington, to give the Republican elected in the Charleston district of South Carolina the seat to which he is entitled, and thus to reverse and rebuke the frauds of the Democrats, as an "exhibition of fair play," which would aid them in the North in 1880. The Republican not only advises what is expedient, but gives the reasons which impel its counsel; it does not base its exhortation upon any rule of right, or of justice, or conformity to law, or Republican or Democratic principles; it says that such an evidence of fair play would help the Democratic party. The idea which lies at the bottom of the suggestion by the Republican is palpable. It is that the fraud and crime of the Democratic party in the South has destroyed, as it ought to destroy, any hopes it may have entertained of electing a President in 1880. The Republican is not in any open and popularly appreciative manner desirous of right for the sake of right, but it is anxious that the universal fraud and criminal force as against the liberty of the citizen should be so far offset by the recent investigation and equitable decision of the House of Representatives in one especial case, that the "independent" press may point to it as a specimen of Democratic honor, and a doubtful State, or hesitating States may be gained to the Democracy in 1880. It is quite certain that the Democracy had better lose presently a Representative fraudulently elected, than to show its hand before it has finished its game.

AN INSULT TO THE UNITED STATES.

A MARSHAL NEARLY KILLED IN SOUTH CAROLINA FOR SHOWING HIS COMMISSION ON ELECTION DAY.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15. The following letter from a prominent citizen of Charleston, S. C., gives an account of the treatment of a Deputy United States Marshal while acting in the discharge of his duty at the late election, and of his subsequent arrest and imprisonment by the local authorities:

During the counting of the votes on the night of the 5th inst., at the poll in the town of Orangeburg, in the county of the same name and in this Congressional District, Sandy Keitt, a regular United States Deputy Marshal, endeavored to obtain admission to the room where votes were being counted. Upon being refused admission he exhibited his commission as a United States Deputy Marshal. Without any act of violence on his part, the State constables at once seized him and hurried him off to jail. The next morning the Justice of the State issued a warrant against him, charging him with attempting to force himself into the room where votes were being counted. Remember the law of South Carolina requires the counting of votes in public, and under the law of South Carolina he had as a citizen a right to witness the count.

Keitt's trial was fixed for last Monday, but on that day, by instruction of District-Attorney Northrup, a United States Commissioner, who went from Columbia to Orangeburg, issued warrants under Section 5,522 for all parties who had interfered with Keitt while in the discharge of his duties, and who had refused him permission to witness the count. Next day, while Keitt was quietly standing in the streets of Orangeburg, he was surrounded by a crowd of Democrats, including those whom he had arrested. Some drew their pistols to keep Keitt's friends from coming to his rescue, while others beat and cut him up fearfully. After nearly killing him, Keitt was carried off to jail, while his assailants were allowed to walk off undisturbed. He is now lying in jail for having the audacity, in the State of South Carolina to exhibit a commission from the Government of the United States, and that Government is powerless to protect him.

THE PRESIDENT'S LATEST VERSION.

[From the New York Times.]

The President is credited with having made another "statement," this time revised, and corrected by himself. It is neither very lucid, very frank, nor entirely consistent with previous utterances in regard to the subject of which it treats. The subject is, of course, the so-called Southern "policy" of the Administration, with an oblique reference to the President's relations with certain leaders of his party who have assailed that policy. The statement is a fair sample of the curiously inconsequential character of Mr. Hayes' methods of reasoning. If the President would condescend to explain what he means by "bayonet rule," it might be possible to understand the precise significance which he attaches to the determination to protect every citizen in the full and free exercise of all his rights and privileges. If the President thinks this can be done in the South without the intervention of what he calls "the military branch of the Government," he has studied to very little purpose the results of the recent elections in that part of the country.

Congressman Springer says the Democrats must give up New York, New Jersey and Connecticut for 1880, and nominate a candidate who can carry Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. He does not admit that this plan is a confession of defeat in advance, but that is what it amounts to.—Ohio and Illinois are no easier to be carried by the Democrats than the three Middle States he mentions, while Indiana is by no means sure for the Democracy.

THE CHOICE IN 1880.

[From the N. Y. Tribune.]

A Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Press telegraphs that Blaine is coming rapidly as the Republican candidate in 1880. He says many Republicans who opposed the Senator's nomination at Cincinnati now confess their mistake and declare their purpose to work for him in 1880. Old friends and supporters of Grant declare that the condition which at one time seemed to make a third term imperative exist no longer, and they now feel that the party is strong enough to elect any of its distinguished leaders without the aid of Grant's name. Blaine is admitted by all the prominent managers of the party, the correspondent says, to represent, in an eminent degree, the aggressive and progressive element in American politics, and his selection would mean the perpetuation of the Republican party, since he possesses the peculiar skill, experience and ability to exercise the civil authority of the Government, safely, firmly and effectively. It is also thought that under Blaine's strong leadership the Republican element in the South could be so encouraged and strengthened as to return five Southern States to the Republican column.

[From the N. Y. Tribune.]

THE PRESIDENT AND THE SOUTH.

THE CHANGE OF ATTITUDE A MATTER OF FACT AND NOT OF TERMS.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14. Whether or not the attitude of the Administration toward the South may be termed a change of policy, the fact remains undisputed that the violators of the election laws in the States of Louisiana, Florida and South Carolina during the recent canvass are to be prosecuted vigorously. If any law exists by means of which the guilty can be punished, it will be put into operation.—The doubt, therefore, with regard to the attitude of the President seems to be merely with regard to terms and not to facts.

It is certain that those who pledged themselves two years ago to protect the freedmen in the exercise of their rights, and who have taken advantage of opportunity to commit atrocious acts for the purpose of gaining political control, will soon have reason to think that the Southern policy of the Administration has been changed.

[From the Bangor Commercial, Nov. 16.]

WHAT SHALL THE NAME BE?

We commend to the attention of all our readers the article which we present in the columns of the Commercial this evening from the Belfast Progressive Age. Its noble sentiments, we are certain, will meet with the hearty approval of every Democrat and Greenbacker in the Fourth Congressional District. Even before the election of last September they adopted as their motto, "All Who Think Alike Should Act Together," and in the spirit of that motto they went into the contest and won that splendid victory on the 9th of September, over which Greenbackers and Democrats alike, all over the country, rejoiced.

We know of no man in the State who is better entitled to give a name to the united Greenbackers and Democrats of Maine, than Hon. Wm. M. Rust, editor of the Belfast Progressive Age. It was the bold, manly and liberal articles that flowed from his pen for long months before our late state election, that prepared the way for that most magnificent revolution and result in Waldo county last September, that sealed the fate of Eugene Hale and elected THOMPSON H. MERCH to Congress.

Loudly and earnestly has Bro. Rust lifted up his voice not only in behalf of a just and beneficent financial system, but also in behalf of much needed reform in the administration of our State affairs. Since our late election he has exhausted his best efforts in bringing together into a common organization "all who think alike." And now that his efforts are sanctioned by nearly every man in the State who voted for either GARCLON or SMITH, and the Union for which he has labored is about to be consummated, it is both fitting and proper that he should give to that UNION a NAME. The name he has suggested is admirably appropriately and fittingly chosen. We are certain that we but echo the sentiment of every Democrat and every Greenbacker in the Penobscot, Piscataquis and Aroostook Valleys, when we say that they, to a man, are enthusiastically ready to strike hands and unite hearts under the name of

CHECKING INTIMIDATION.

THE PRESIDENT LOOKING INTO THE EFFECT OF ANTI-KU-KLUX LEGISLATION—HIS DETERMINATION TO ENFORCE THE ELECTION LAWS.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15. The President has been making an investigation regarding the practical working of the Ku-Klux law in the South several years ago, under which a large number of persons were tried, convicted, and sentenced to the Penitentiary at Albany, New York. Of several Southern Republicans who have called on him this week he inquired whether or not the rigid enforcement of that law did not break up the Ku-Klux and compel the members of that organization to respect the United States laws and stop their lawlessness. The answer made was in the affirmative and the President said that he thought the time had come to punish with equal severity those persons in the Southern States who at the recent elections openly defied the Federal officers who were appointed under the provisions of the Federal election law, and that the necessary steps would be taken to secure the conviction and punishment of all such offenders.

FIAT NEWSPAPERS.

[From the Rockland Free Press.]

"Come reader," says the Bangor Tribune "let's have a little quiet talk for a few minutes." Oh, yes! certainly, any way to please. We'll not be hard with you; it's not our purpose to crowd the mourners. Of course we imagine what your feelings must be, but never mind, Mr. Tribune, keep the ten cents, and if you cannot afford to give us the whole sheet, as you agreed, give us a half sheet; if you cannot do that, let us have a quarter, and if you can't afford the quarter, for mercy sake send us something if only a small lock of your hair. But why not make a short cut out of all your troubles by simply printing on your fractional sheet the magic words, "This is a whole newspaper?" No Greenbacker could find fault with that.

THE NORTH CAROLINA RETURNING BOARD. Notwithstanding the outcry of the Democrats against Returning Boards, the North Carolina ex-rebels seem to have devised a scheme that permits local Returning Boards to nullify any election, however fairly conducted. A Washington despatch to the Boston Advertiser says:

The delay in announcing the returns from North Carolina is now explained. Although three Republicans were fairly elected to Congress, the chances are that they will all be counted out. Under a law passed by the last Democratic Legislature, both precinct and County officers of elections have opportunities to revise and correct the returns. These have been widely and unscrupulously used by Democratic officers in the exact way intended by the framers of the law. Another method of fraud has been discovered as the one practiced in various portions of North Carolina. After the registration lists were brought to the polling places, and before the polls were opened, pencil marks were drawn through the names of large numbers of colored Republicans, and when they presented themselves they were told that for some reason the managers did not understand, their names had been struck off, and so their votes could not be received. This device, together with the method by revision, appears to have constituted the North Carolina plan.

THE STEWART GRAVE ROBBERY.

VARIOUS RUMORS AND REPORTS

NO ARREST IS MADE

Reports Discredited

Reports which had been in circulation relative to the finding of the stolen goods in the grave robbery are pronounced by the police to be without foundation. The police have no further clue to the matter. It is thought that the robbery was the work of a man named Ma[illegible] of Fall River, who was arrested a few days since and attempted to rob a jewelry store in this city

A PUMPKIN SHELL.

(Concluded.)

The doctor declared the fever free from infection but none the less dangerous on that account so that the boarders could give full vent to their pity and concern without a qualm for their own safety. Mrs M Glosky was a master-hand at beef tea, broths and grueds of various kinds, and had a magical knack in shaking up pillows, and was the more liberal with her own time and toil as they were her sole expenditure in Patty's behalf. The hard cash came from Peter's pocket so readily and plentifully that when Patty was getting better, Mrs M Glosky found heart to smile, her comely face took many a wrinkle of merriment and she shook her head knowingly over this sudden recklessness of generosity upon the part of the heretofore canny and prudent Scot.

In truth Patty's sickness made a big hole in Peter's hoard, but he found one treasure increase as another depleted and never having known the nature of true happiness, he held it now far above gold, the charm of novelty being added to all other ecstasy. Upon one day his head was in the clouds, and it seemed to him that he was walking upon air. He could scarcely keep the tears from swelling up into his eyes, like those of the foolish child he had left yonder sitting up for the first time in a stuffed chair at Mrs M Glosky's.

They had said she was all dressed now and he could go up and see her, and he went up the stairs his heart getting higher and higher into his throat with every step, till at last when he reached her open door, and she held out her thin little hands, and faltered out some words that were quite inaudible the speech he had counted upon for such him, his heart choked it and he could only stand there and look at her, and then go forward and kneel by her side and hold her two little hands close in his own.

"Oh my best benefactor" faltered Patty—"my savior."

"Tut tut" said Peter, "there's but the one Savior—He that raised the daughter of Jairus." And then Peter could get no further.

For months he had seen her pretty head only upon the pillow, with its shorn silken locks all tangled about her fevered face, and the folks about the house had said she'd never live to see the spring, and here she was up and dressed and out of danger before the first tender buds had fully sprout. From the sunset tree at the window Peter had been raised a fatalist, but religion had never before held that sweet savor of gratitude to him. How he thanked God for the sweetness of her voice, as she went on to tell him all about it! The quality and quantity of a voice were more to Peter than to most folks, he having been cursed or blessed, as the case may be, with a hankering after music from his infancy, and seldom had he heard even upon the musical stage (his one extravagance) so sweet a voice as hers. She told him of her home in dear old Surrey, where she had been reared by her mother's sister, who kept a long low red roofed hostelry there, and how the days went by as like one another as two peas in a pod until a fine lady came traveling by, and took a notion that Patty would make a nice companion for her, and tempted her off from one place to another, till they reached America where a change of fortune for the lady threw Patty upon her own resource and after a time she fell into a clerkship in the big store where Peter found her a prey to helplessness and fever.

"And that had been for you," said poor Patty in conclusion "I should have been carried off to a hospital there to die and be buried among the paupers," and here her head dropped and finally it rested upon Peter's shoulder, and what words he said, he never could remember. But who was the dress of gold or plaits for the future, compared to this treasure he had found? He went out from her presence with his head in the clouds, and meeting Shangles (who built on the way home very castles about Patty's welfare all along), he began to hold forth to him in a most incoherent and surprising manner till at last Shangles asked if he might go in and see her, upon which Peter looked rather amazed. Peter demurred, but Shangles insisted.

"The fact is" said Shangles—"I may as well tell you Robinson (for they had grown quite intimate during Patty's sickness) that I don't know what serious consequences may come of her hitherto adventure with Miss Burr. I've never been able to get her sweet face from my mind and memory and your touching details of her struggles and illness have won my heart. I believe I shall be tempted to marry her this sort of thing goes on."

Peter stood still and looked at him from head to foot a gathering expression of contumelious hate.

"Young man" said he at last "I took you to be Shangles friend."

"I love a woman" said Shangles getting very red. "I don't care anything about her condition in life, no obstacle of that sort has any weight with me."

"I suppose it's a more formidable obstacle" said Peter "I suppose some only child has her you blockhead and is going to marry her him off?"

"Oh that indeed" said Shangles sadly. "Why" thought he, "didn't you say so before?"

Peter didn't tell him that he had only lately made up his mind to the audacity, but he immediately took Mrs M Glosky into his confidence and they plotted up the matter between them. Peter's natural pride and kind heart ought finding, she was in a delightfully singing.

"Peter Peter Pumpkin eater,
Had a wife and couldn't keep her;
He put her in a pumpkin shell
And there he kept her very well."

So cozily, when Patty was well enough to go out and hunt up her old boarding place where they hailed her as a resurrected ghost she found in the old landing table her bank books as good as new and as good luck would have it, the bank had been broken during her sickness, but the big door opened to her touch in such wise drawn out harmoney, and though it was a small sum for a wedding trousseau according to popular opinion, it more than satisfied her Patty, who hated to be beholden to Peter for even this necessity.

They had quite a wedding after all, for the boarders catch and all took a personal interest in the affair, and Shangles, who was Peter's best man never took his eyes off the beautiful blushing Patty. Mrs M Glosky gave them a room on the lower floor but Patty brought with her the picture of Prince Charlie, which she declared is good as a photograph of Peter it was so like him. Nobody else could see the slight resemblance in the features and irregular features of Peter to those of the young Pretender but Patty stuck to her opinion. Everything went as merry as a marriage bell, and as the months went by the only thing wanting to Patty's full felicity was a little home of her own. Boarding was all very nice in its way and Mrs M'Glosky was like a mother to her, but the time was approaching when Patty coveted seclusion and shrank from the presence of strangers.

Besides, there was so little for her hands to do, sometimes they lay folded in her lap for hours together and this she thought was a sin, when poor Peter's every minute was filled with toil. It seemed so strangely out of place to Patty to have her food put only prepared for her, but almost put into her mouth and some one at her back to pull away her chair.

"If one were a cripple, Peter," she said, "it couldn't be more helpless."

Had a wife and couldn't keep her."

Peter said it was too bad, that he wished he could go to housekeeping, but money was so hard to get, and then he would draw down his mouth dolefully, and sing Patty would be remorseful and promise never to speak of house-keeping again, until Mrs M Glosky would tell her what a bad way it was for a young wife to begin, and then Mrs M Glosky would sing in a wheezy voice.

"Sing a wadda bake, the wadda brew,
For the spoiling o' some poy hue
She wadna wash and she wadna wring
For the spoiling o' her gowden ring."

Poor Patty's eyes would fill with tears and her lips tremble, and she would declare to Mrs M Glosky that she'd be only too glad to do all her own work if Peter could afford to go to housekeeping, and Mrs M Glosky would relenting, and tell her there was a good time coming.

The golden days of Indian summer went by, sharp autumn winds whistled through the branches of the sumac-tree, and Christmas was at hand.

One frosty night Peter came home early, and after supper proposed a little walk. The boarders all seemed preparing for some little jollity at their own, and the parlors were deserted. Patty had been a little down-hearted all day, and was glad enough to put on her rose-colored hood and warm cloak, and, leaning upon Peter's stalwart arm, go out into the keen, brisk air. They had only gone a block or two when Peter stopped before a two story brick house, and proposed they should go in and make a call.

"Oh, Peter!" begged Patty, "I don't want to see any strangers."

"Nonsense," said Peter. "They're plain folks like ourselves, and have just gone to housekeeping upon the second floor here. I'd like you to see their rooms."

Patty obeyed reluctantly and when she found the rooms furnished just as she'd told Peter time and again she'd like to have her own—plainly, but, oh! so comfortably, with gay chintz covering on the parlor furniture, pretty pictures upon the walls, curtains of Turkey red, and a glowing fire in the grate, and when they went through to the kitchen everything was so complete, with hot and cold water at the housekeeper's hand, and copper saucepans by the half dozen that Patty could see her pretty face in, decanters and glasses upon the table, and the kettle boiling away upon the shining range, Patty's heart was filled with joy.

"Where is this happy creature?" she said, for nobody came to welcome them.

"Come over here" said Peter, pulling Patty to the mantel. "Here she is." And Patty saw her own face in the looking-glass. Over it in a gorgeous frame was this inscription in illuminated letters. "A Pumpkin Shell." And all at once Peter began to sing in his finest baritone.

"Peter, Peter, pumpkin-eater,
Had a wife and couldn't keep her;
Put her in a pumpkin shell,
And there he kept her very well."

Then, outside in the corridor, a mad, merry chorus took up the refrain.

"He put her in a pumpkin shell,
And there he kept her very well."

And all the boarders, headed by Mrs. M'Glosky herself, will the picture of Prince Charlie in her hand came trooping in, and took possession of the second floor. They danced and sang till the clock round the corner rang out the hour of twelve. Then they left Patty in her little home, where she and Peter live to this day, the happiest couple in that part of the universe.

is a practical Furrier of 3 years experience, that he has learned the business thoroughly from the ground, that he has never been in any other business, that he does not keep Boots and Shoes and Umbrellas, that he does not employ a woman to superintend the making of Furs that he does not buy his goods at Auction in Boston and New York, that he does not keep his times as large a stock of furs as other houses in the city, but that he keeps a first class Stock of Furs; that he manufactures all his goods and guarantees every article he sells to be just what he represents it to be; that he can do repairing in better style and cheaper than any other house in Bangor, and that he can and will sell all his goods as cheap and cheaper than they can be bought elsewhere.

Give MR. MEHEGY a call and be convinced of the truth of the above statements.

As Mr M manufactures his exports, he is enabled to pay the highest cash prices for
